1 Module 1 Hands-On Assignment

You are organizing your family contact list, but find that the current format of the phone numbers is flawed! The contact phone numbers are in different formats and you want valid phone numbers to all follow the same format.

Below, you can see that we have a file where each line consists of a person's name and their phone number.

First, run the code below to extract the lines.

text = None

with open('assets/phonebook.txt', 'r') as file:
    lines = file.readlines()

print(*lines[:5],sep='\n')  # print the first 5 rows in the file

David Smith: +1-361-789-5031

Michael Rodriguez: 801 998 5951

Sarah Johnson: (270) 573-8188

Jane Williams: 571.358.9802

Laura Davis: (965) 511-7358

[16]:

'Chris Miller: 52564\n']

2 Task 1: Create reg expression

These are possible formats a phone number could be stored in:

Parentheses: (409) 339-9584

Dashes: 943-641-7270

Dots: 574.874.7163

Spaces: 175 335 3625

International: +1-536-234-1765

Plain: 6565865784

For this task, you must define the 'reg' expression such that the given code is able to extract phone numbers in every one of these formats.

When we use reg.findall, we want to obtain a list of 3 strings containing the digits of each phone number separated by section. For example, if we have:

`str = John Smith: 123 456 7890`

We want `re.findall(reg, str)` on this line using our regex expression to obtain a list that contains the following:

[‘123’,‘456’,‘7890’]

Look up how to use regex ‘capturing groups’ to accomplish this. The demo notebook associated with this assignment also contains hints on how you can accomplish this task.

Assign your reg expression to `reg` in `task_1_solution`.

We use your reg expression in `extract_contents` to extract the contents of `lines` into a list where each entry in the list formatted like so:

`['First Last','000', '000', '0000']`

import re

def extract_contents(reg):
    extracted_contents = []
    for line in lines:

        name, number = line.strip().split(':')
        number = number.strip()

        matches = reg.findall(number)

            parts = [part for part in match if part] extracted_contents.append([name] + parts) return extracted_contents

[14]:
def task_1_solution():

    # YOUR CODE HERE
    #raise NotImplementedError()
    # Define the regex pattern for recognizing phone numbers
    import re
    #reg = re.compile(r"""

    #    (\d{4})                # Last 4 digits
    #""", re.VERBOSE)
        (?<!\d)

3 Task 2: Normalizing Data

Now, we'd like to normalize the phone numbers to the format: (123) 456-7890.

The function below will take in the `stu_contents` that you helped define in task 1 as an argument. It will then alter every entry in the `stu_contents` list to be a string in the (123) 456-7890 format. The function will return the `extracted_contents_normalized` list as a list of strings.

For example,

The first entry in your task 1 `extracted_contents` is

['David Smith', '838', '177', '8461']

This should be turned into

[18]:
```python
def task_2_solution():

    extracted_contents, _ = task_1_solution()

    extracted_contents_normalized = []

    #raise NotImplementedError()
    for content in extracted_contents:
        extracted_contents_normalized.append(f'{content[0]}: ({content[1]})␣ ↪{content[2]}-{content[3]}')

    return extracted_contents_normalized
